EX-SENATOR LOCHER DIES IN CLEVELAND HOSPITAL SATURDAY

Collapse Follows Operation; Served Under Donahay

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Former United States Senator Cyrus Locher died at 4:30 o'clock this morning at St. Luke's Hospital after suffering a complete collapse late yesterday from the effects of an operation for gall stones. He was 51 years old.

Locher, who for five years was director of commerce under Gov. A. V. Donahay and succeeded the late Frank B. Willis in the senate, had been in the hospital nearly a month.

Although his condition was considered dangerous, hope for his recovery was felt until yesterday when he had a relapse and another blood transfusion became necessary.

Cyrus Locher began his long and active political career under Mayor Tom L. Johnson back in 1908, a year after he was graduated from the law school of Western Reserve University. Johnson made him an assistant law director.

From that time on Senator Locher was more or less in the political limelight. After two years in the city law office he resigned, resumed private practice and became an instructor in the Western Reserve Law School.

In 1912 he was elected prosecutor of Cuyahoga County. Two years later he was re-elected to the office. Later he became president of the John Marshall Law School in Cleveland.

He was appointed state director of commerce by former Gov. A. V. Donahay in 1923. Here he is credited with being the chief advisor of the governor.

He quit the job in the governor's cabinet to become United States senator, being appointed by Donahay to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Frank B. Willis, who died at Delaware, O., during a political meeting.

Senator Locher was defeated for the Democratic nomination a few months later by a narrow margin.

He married Miss Beula Baker of Cleveland the year following his graduation from Western Reserve University Law School.

Senator Locher was aggressive in politics, law or business. He was interested in farming, and owned a big farm in Illinois.

Senator Locher won Donahay's gratitude in 1922, when Donahay, then state auditor, wanted to get the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. The Cuyahoga County Democratic organization tried to wreck Donahay's ambitions. Locher refused to join the movement and was almost alone among Democratic leaders here in his support of Donahay.

Senator Locher took the job as commerce director for the purpose of reorganizing the department and abolishing the job, at that time he said he took it as a personal favor to the former governor. He served more than five years.

Under Senator Locher's administration the department became an important one.

Senator Locher was a farm boy. He was born on a farm in Riley Township, Putnam County, March 8, 1878. His parents were Christian and Fannie Locher. He attended Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, graduating in 1900. After graduation he became superintendent of schools at Woodsfield. He spent his vacations studying law at the University of Michigan.

Beetham declined to say who filed the complaints and what reports are involved.

Similar complaints were filed by a group of citizens of Marysville and a dry agent also will be sent to the latter city.

MILL DESTROYED

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—The Walter H. Schaefer feed mill at Chesterland, Geauga County, was destroyed by fire during the night. The loss was estimated at $20,000.

ITALIAN DICTATOR HOLDING FUTURE OF REPARATIONS MEET

British Reply Is Aimed At Italy; Await Answer

THE HAGUE, Aug. 17.—Italy's delegation to the conference of governments asked Premier Mussolini for fresh instructions today as Philip Snowden presented Great Britain's reply to the new proposal of the four powers which are aligned against her in her demands for a complete revision of the Young plan.

It was believed here that the conference now is in the hands of the Italian Dictator. Well informed observers learned that the British reply was aimed at Premier Mussolini and the Italian delegation to the current conference.

It was understood that the Snowden reply attacked Italy, which it characterized as the beneficiary of the existing reparations settlement and as unwilling to yield any of its benefits.

The reply also was said to argue that the proposal of the four powers to Great Britain's demands met only twenty-five per cent of them.

M. Pirelli, of the Italian delegation, left The Hague today for an unknown destination. It was reasoned he probably would meet Mussolini's envoy in Milan to obtain new instructions.

While the contents of the reply drawn up by Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, have not been made public, it was understood in authoritative circles that the reply made clear that Great Britain still insisted upon a revision of the Young plan and that England would not be satisfied by the "odds and ends" offered by the experts at the recent conference of reparations experts at Paris.

It was understood that Great Britain has let it be known that she expects from her former allies the same sacrifices which Britain has made to them during the war.

As a consequence, it was reasoned here, the success or failure of the whole negotiations now rests, as far as Great Britain is concerned, with the other powers.

In British quarters it was stated that unless the other nations go a little beyond the concessions they made in their note to Britain yesterday, and meet Britain's demands, it was useless for the conference to go on.

ARMS RESTORED TO COAST GUARD BOATS THROUGH NEW ORDER

Recent Firing On Patrols Results In Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—District Commander Rasmussen, of the coast guard, who recently ordered machine guns and rifles removed from patrol boats on the Great Lakes, has ordered them restored because of "recent instances of firing on the boats by rum runners," coast guard headquarters revealed today.

Rasmussen, according to headquarters, has reported he ordered the guns removed in order "not to jeopardize the lives of innocent persons."

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Machine guns and rifles have been ordered restored on coast guard patrol boats on the Great Lakes because of "recent instances of firing on the boats by rum runners," it was learned here today.

The order has not yet been received at Cleveland coast guard headquarters. The patrol boats have been operating since the removal order with only the men's sidearms as protection in combats with dangerous liquor law violators.

After a brief trial of the new system, Washington headquarters are convinced the coast guard boats should continue to be armed because of the dangerous character of criminals with whom the coast guards come into contact.

Because of treaties with Canada regarding the undefended frontier, it was necessary to dismount some of the larger guns which some coast guard boats transferred to Great Lakes duty had carried.

AUTOIST FATALLY INJURED AS CAR TURNS OVER ON DAYTON PIKE

A man identified as John C. Atkinson, about 22, of near Wilmington, died at McClellan Hospital at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon of injuries suffered when his auto hit a stretch of fresh gravel, skidded and turned over three times on the Dayton-Xenia Pike, near Beavercreek High School, five miles west of Xenia at 11:50 a. m.

Witnesses of the accident made futile efforts to obtain the services of a physician and the dying man was finally brought to the Xenia hospital by Hugh Marshall, proprietor of a nearby filling station, and William Ferguson.

He died less than an hour after being received at the hospital, his injuries consisting of a fracture of the lower end of the spine, internal injuries and a badly crushed chest.

He was employed at Rest Haven Park, Dayton-Xenia Pike. Atkinson was driving toward Xenia and lost control of the machine when he drove into a stretch of gravel after passing a car.

Identification was completed by Coroner Frank M. Chambliss, who was personally acquainted with the accident victim. Atkinson lived on a farm near Wilmington. He is survived by his parents and two sisters.

RUM RUNNER SLAYER OF GUARDSMEN DIES AT SECRET HANGING

James H. Alderman Pays Penalty For Murder Charge

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Aug. 17.—James Horace Alderman, slayer of two coast guardsmen, was executed in a seaplane hangar at 6:04 a. m. today, the U. S. marshal's office announced. Utmost secrecy surrounded the hanging of the 50-year-old rum runner.

Because county authorities had refused to allow a federal prisoner to be hanged in the county jail, a temporary gallows was erected in the airplane hangar, which is government property.

The rum runner died for "murder on the high seas." The episode took place Aug. 7, 1927, after being captured in his rum boat thirty-five miles off the coast. Alderman held his captors at bay with a pistol while Robert E. Weech, his companion on the rum boat, disarmed the coast guardsmen. He then took possession of the vessel.

Alderman, it was reported, threatened to force the guardsmen and Webster, a "walk the plank" but changed his mind and prepared to place them in his rum-runner, set fire to it and pushed it out into the Atlantic again.

The guardsmen, desperate, rushed the pair, and Webster was the first to drop in the rain of bullets. Sidney C. Sanderlin and Victor A. Lamby also were killed, and Jodie Hollingsworth was seriously injured but Alderman and Weech lost the battle to superior numbers.

Pleading self-defense, Alderman quickly was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to hang. Weech pleaded guilty to a less serious offense and served a year and a day in Atlanta penitentiary.

President Hoover's refusal of commutation recently eliminated Alderman's last hope for life.

REFUELING PLANE CONTINUES EASTWARD AFTER TAKING GAS

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo., Aug. 17.—The airplane Sun God, speeding from coast-to-coast, resumed its eastward journey at 8:10 a. m. (MST) today after having spent the night flying over the airport here awaiting the coming of daylight to complete re-fueling.

The plane again will refuel at Cheyenne. The pilots, Lieut. Nick Mamer and Art Walker—had to make a desperate fight to keep from ending the trip in Rock Springs. Arriving near dark last night, they first ran into bad luck when a broken gasoline line on the refueling plane prevented them from taking on the necessary fuel to continue their trip before darkness fell.

The line was repaired but no powerful lights were available at the airport and the flyers had to depend on a flashlight to show the way to refueling operations.

Contacts, however, were made three times under difficulties and 165 gallons of gas were put aboard, one hundred more went up after daylight.

Most of the night the Sun God hung 3,000 to 4,000 feet above the airport.

A note dropped by Lieut. Mamer as he took off said the motor was working perfectly.

"Both Walker and myself feeling fine," he wrote.

The aviators hope to make Cleveland, Ohio, before tonight.

The flight is the first attempt at long distance sustained flying with refueling pre-arranged at intervals along the route. Leaving Spokane Thursday at 6:00 p. m. Pacific time, Mamer headed his ship south to San Francisco. They were reported sighted at Medford, Ore., at 11:50 p. m. Nothing was heard of its progress until it arrived at Mills Field, San Francisco.

At San Francisco it was estimated that the plane had averaged 100 miles per hour from the time it left Spokane.

CHINA MAKES PLANS FOR LONG CAMPAIGN AGAINST INVADERS

Notifies Signers Of Kellogg Pact Of Defense Rights

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—China's war department began today to make extensive preparations for a possible winter campaign against the Soviet union after officially notifying the Kellogg pact signatories that she would stand for no infringements of her territory and that she reserved the right of defending the nation.

Inquiries in the Shanghai markets disclosed the fact that the Chinese army officials were making heavy purchases of blankets, uniform khaki and other war supplies, indicating that the Nanking government believed a winter campaign in Manchuria was probable.

At the same time it was announced officially that the Nanking minister for foreign affairs, Dr. C. T. Wang, had instructed the Chinese minister at Washington, C. C. Wu, to notify the powers which are signatory to the Kellogg anti-war agreement, of which both Russia and China also are signatories, that while the Chinese government hoped to settle the current dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway amicably and by conference, China reserved the right to defend her borders by force should her rights be infringed upon.

The Chinese government has made many efforts to induce the Soviet officials to settle the controversy by conference, the Soviets, however, have remained staunch in their demands that the Chinese Eastern Railway, which was seized by the Nanking government, be restored, "status quo ante," before they would be willing to discuss the matter.

The Soviets also insisted that the Soviet officials of the road, charged by the Chinese government with using the railway as an organ of Communist propaganda, be reinstated in their posts, the Nanking authorities, as well as the officials of the Mukden government, have refused to do this, although agreeing to the appointment of other Russian officers for the road.

After crossing central Europe, western Russia and the hazardous Ural, a mountain chain which in the early stages of the flight was regarded with great apprehension, the dirigible today was in the very heart of Siberia, making for the north end of Lake Baikal.

At last reports she was north of Naryn, in the valley of the sparsely inhabited river valley. This was at 10 p. m. last night (GMT 5 p. m. E. S. T.).

These reports indicated that the Graf was well ahead of her schedule in the most dangerous flight ever undertaken by the giant ship and her valiant commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, Naryn is well over 3,000 miles from Friedrichshafen, Germany, where the Graf took off at 10:35 p. m. E. S. T. Wednesday.

Dr. Eckener said before leaving his home base that he hoped to accomplish the approximately 6,000 mile journey from Friedrichshafen to Tokyo in about 120 hours, according to the present progress with the weather continuing favorable, the dirigible should arrive in Tokyo much before the commander had hoped it would.

Dr. Eckener, in guiding the Graf across Siberia yesterday and last night again swerved to the north, passing, for the first time since entering the Soviet Union, north of the 60th parallel. This was done by the Graf's commander in an effort to avoid certain meteorological conditions to the south and at the same time to get an easier crossing over the Ural.

According to the Central Weather Bureau here, Dr. Eckener was expected to find favorable weather along the Ob valley, with light and variable winds. From there to Yeniseik, however, strong winds were predicted from the west, with heavy banks of fog which probably would affect visibility.

It was believed that not until the Graf reached a point well toward Lake Baikal would Dr. Eckener decide on whether to make on a straight line for the important Si-Eastern airway to Vladivostok, travel on directly across Manchuria, following the Chinese Eastern Railway to Valadivostok, or whether to skirt the northern edge of the huge lake and drop into Manchuria on a circle from the north.

According to dispatches received by the aviation bureau here from various points all seemed to be going well on board the huge aircraft.

So far the Graf has experienced no great difficulty. They had passed over some of the most desolate.

CONTINUE ADVANCE INTO MANCHURIA TO ISOLATE RAILROAD

Chinese Warlord Prepares To Resist Invasion

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—Russia's red army has invaded Manchuria with a large force, occupied two towns west of Manchuli and today continued to advance with the apparent intention of isolating the Manchurian railway junction, it was announced in an official communique here.

General Chang Hsueh-Liang, war lord of Manchuria and commander of the Chinese forces along the border, ordered his advance guard to resist the invasion.

The foreign legations at the capital of Manchuria have not yet been informed of the action of the Soviet army. The communique said the towns were occupied last night.

Mukden officials returning from Manchuli said today there had been border clashes between Chinese and Soviet troops throughout the week.

Tsai Yun-Sheng, one of the Chinese negotiators, returned from the border today and reported that there was a clash between the patrols near Manchuli on Tuesday when the Russians crossed into Manchuria in pursuit of the Czarist Russians who had been harassing the Red soldiers and who, Tsai said, were continually instigating border clashes.

Before the reports of the Red army invasion into Manchuria territory several of the Chinese officials still held out the hope that a peaceful agreement between the two giant republics of the Far East might be reached.

MANCHULI, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—General Chang Hsueh-Liang, war lord of Manchuria and in command of the Chinese troops massed along the borders, urgently summoned a military conference today to cope with new developments on the Soviet frontier.

ITALIAN DICTATOR HOLDING FUTURE OF REPARATIONS MEET

British Reply Is Aimed At Italy; Await Answer

THE HAGUE, Aug. 17.—Italy's delegation to the conference of governments asked Premier Mussolini for fresh instructions today as Philip Snowden presented Great Britain's reply to the new proposal of the four powers which are aligned against her in her demands for a complete revision of the Young plan.

It was believed here that the conference now is in the hands of the Italian Dictator. Well informed observers learned that the British reply was aimed at Premier Mussolini and the Italian delegation to the current conference.

It was understood that the Snowden reply attacked Italy, which it characterized as the beneficiary of the existing reparations settlement and as unwilling to yield any of its benefits.

The reply also was said to argue that the proposal of the four powers to Great Britain's demands met only twenty-five per cent of them.

M. Pirelli, of the Italian delegation, left The Hague today for an unknown destination. It was rumored he probably would meet Mussolini's envoy in Milan to obtain new instructions.

While the contents of the reply drawn up by Snowden, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, have not been made public, it was understood in authoritative circles that the reply made clear that Great Britain still insisted upon a revision of the Young plan and that England would not be satisfied by the "odds and ends" offered by the experts at the recent conference of reparations experts at Paris.

It was understood that Great Britain has let it be known that she expects from her former allies the same sacrifices which Britain has made to them during the war. As a consequence, it was reasoned here, the success or failure of the whole negotiations now rests, as far as Great Britain is concerned, with the other powers.

In British quarters it was stated that unless the other nations go a little beyond the concessions they made in their note to Britain yesterday, and meet Britain's demands, it was useless for the conference to go on.

ARMS RESTORED TO COAST GUARD BOATS THROUGH NEW ORDER

Recent Firing On Patrols Results In Change

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—District Commander Rasmussen, of the coast guard, who recently ordered machine guns and rifles removed from patrol boats on the Great Lakes, has ordered them restored because of "recent instances of firing on the boats by rum runners," coast guard headquarters revealed today.

Rasmussen, according to headquarters, has reported he ordered the guns removed in order "not to jeopardize the lives of innocent persons."

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Machine guns and rifles have been ordered restored on coast guard patrol boats on the Great Lakes because of "recent instances of firing on the boats by rum runners," it was learned here today.

The order has not yet been received at Cleveland coast guard headquarters. The patrol boats have been operating since the removal order with only the men's sidearms as protection in combats with dangerous liquor law violators.

After a brief trial of the new system, Washington headquarters are convinced the coast guard boats should continue to be armed because of the dangerous character of criminals with whom the coast guards come into conflict.

Because of treaties with Canada regarding the undefended frontier, it was necessary to dismount some of the larger guns which some coast guard boats transferred to Great Lakes duty had carried.

RUM RUNNER SLAYER OF GUARDSMEN DIES AT SECRET HANGING

James H. Alderman Pays
Penalty For Murder
Charge

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., Aug. 17.—James Horace Alderman, slayer of two coast guardsmen, was executed in a seaplane hangar at 6:04 a. m. today, the U. S. marshal's office announced. Umost secrecy surrounded the hanging of the 50-year-old rum runner who had refused to allow a federal prisoner to be hanged in the county jail, a temporary gallows was erected in the airplane hangar, which is government property.

The rum runner died for "murder on the high seas." The episode took place Aug. 7, 1927, after being captured in his rum boat thirty-five miles off the coast. Alderman held the captain of the boat, a pistol while Robert E. Weech, his companion on the rum boat, disarmed the coast guardsmen. He then took possession of the vessel.

Alderman, it was reported, threatened to force the guardsmen and Robert E. Webster, secret service agent, to "walk the plank" but changed his mind and prepared to place them in his rum-runner, set fire to it and pushed it out into the Atlantic again.

The guardsmen, desperate, rushed the pair, and Webster was the first to drop in the rain of bullets. Sidney C. Sanderlin and Victor A. Lamby also were killed, and Jodie Hollingsworth was seriously injured but Alderman and Weech lost the battle to superior numbers.

Pleading self-defense, Alderman quickly was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to hang. Weech pleaded guilty to a less serious offense and served a year and a day in Atlanta penitentiary.

President Hoover's refusal of commutation recently eliminated Alderman's last hope for life.

CHINA MAKES PLANS FOR LONG CAMPAIGN AGAINST INVADERS

Notifies Signers Of Kellogg Pact Of Defense Rights

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—China's war department began today to make extensive preparations for a possible winter campaign against the Soviet union after officially notifying the Kellogg pact signatories that she would stand for no infringements of her territory and that she reserved the right of defending the nation.

Inquiries in the Shanghai markets disclosed the fact that the Chinese army officials were making heavy purchases of blankets, uniform khaki and other war supplies, indicating that the Nanking government believed a winter campaign in Manchuria was probable.

At the same time it was announced officially that the Nanking minister for foreign affairs, Dr. C. T. Wang, had instructed the Chinese minister at Washington, C. C. Wu, to notify the powers which are signatory to the Kellogg anti-war agreement, of which both Russia and China also are signatories, that while the Chinese government hoped to settle the current dispute over the Chinese Eastern Railway amicably and by conference, China reserved the right to defend her borders by force should her rights be infringed upon.

The Chinese government has made many efforts to induce the Soviet officials to settle the controversy by conference, the Soviets, however, have remained staunch in their demands that the Chinese Eastern Railway, which was seized by the Nanking government with using the railway as an organ of Communist propaganda, be reinstated in their posts, the Nanking authorities, as well as the officials of the Mukden government, have refused to do this, although agreeing to the appointment of other Russian officers for the road.

The Soviet officials of the road, charged by the Chinese government with using the railway as an organ of Communist propaganda, be reinstated in their posts, the Nanking authorities, as well as the officials of the Mukden government, have refused to do this, although agreeing to the appointment of other Russian officers for the road.

COOLIDGE LEADS QUIET LIFE

Former President Strict About Office Hours; Take No Part In Society

(Editor's Note: Following is the last of the story by Mary Alice Parent, University of Southern California senior, who, on her vacation, went to Northampton to find out how Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge were adjusting themselves to their old surroundings after their life in the White House. Miss Parent obtained her information by interviewing tradesfolk and neighbors with whom the former president and first lady of the land now come into contact in their daily life.)

By MARY ALICE PARENT
Written for The United Press
NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Aug. 17.—Calvin Coolidge, who established regular office hours in the White House—and kept them—does the same in Northampton to which he has returned as a plain citizen.

From his house at 21 Massasoit St., he walks to his office on 21 Main St., every morning, reaching his desk about 9 o'clock—many times before that hour. His office differs from most other small town offices in that the Coolidges are an unusual asset to the community. Chamber of Commerce men say the number of visitors here has increased greatly since March 4. A picture of Calvin Coolidge and his home appear upon the chamber's circulars. Hotel owners report heavier business, and more automobiles with license plates from far-away states appear in the streets.

ZEPPELIN AHEAD OF SCHEDULE ON RAPID EASTWARD FLIGHT

Passes Hazardous Mountains; Makes Fast Time

MOSCOW, Aug. 17.—Racing steadily through the unexplored skies above the lonely, desolate stretches of northern Siberia, the Graf Zeppelin continued today to make rapid progress toward Tokyo, the goal of the mighty-airline in the second leg of her flight around the world.

After crossing central Europe, western Russia and the hazardous Ural, a mountain chain which in the early stages of the flight was regarded with great apprehension, the dirigible today was in the very heart of Siberia, making for the northern edge of Lake Baikal.

At last reports she was north of Naryn, in the valley of the sparsely inhabited river valley. This was at 10 p. m. last night GMT (5 p. m. E. S. T.).

These reports indicated that the Graf was well ahead of her schedule in the most dangerous flight ever undertaken by the giant ship and her valiant commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, Naryn is well over 3,000 miles from Friedrichshafen, Germany, where the Graf took off at 10:35 p. m. E. S. T. Wednesday.

Dr. Eckener said before leaving his home base that he hoped to accomplish the approximately 6,000 mile journey from Friedrichshafen to Tokyo in about 120 hours, according to the present progress and with the weather continuing favorable, the dirigible should arrive in Tokyo much before the commander had hoped it would.

Dr. Eckener, in guiding the Graf across Siberia yesterday and last night again swerved to the north, passing, for the first time since entering the Soviet Union, north of the 60th parallel, this was done by the Graf's commander in an effort to avoid certain meteorological conditions to the south and at the same time to get an easier crossing over the Ural.

According to the Central Weather Bureau here, Dr. Eckener was expected to find favorable weather along the Ob valley, with light and variable winds. From there to Yeniseik, however, strong winds were predicted from the east, with heavy banks of fog which probably would affect visibility.

It was believed that not until the Graf reached a point well toward Lake Baikal would Dr. Eckener decide on whether to make on a straight line for the important Si-Estern airway to Vladivostok, travel on directly across Manchuria, following the Chinese Eastern Railway to Vladivostok, or whether to skirt the northern edge of the huge lake and drop into Manchuria on a circle from the north.

According to dispatches received by the aviation bureau here from various points all seemed to be going well on board the huge air-craft.

So far the Graf has experienced no great difficulty. They had passed over some of the most beautiful scenery of the world.

CONTINUE ADVANCE INTO MANCHURIA TO ISOLATE RAILROAD

Chinese Warlord Prepares To Resist Invasion

MUKDEN, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—Russia's red army has invaded Manchuria with a large force, occupied two towns west of Manchuli and today continued to advance with the apparent intention of isolating the Manchurian railway junction, it was announced in an official communique here.

General Chang Hsueh-Liang, war lord of Manchuria and commander of the Chinese forces along the border, ordered his advance guard to resist the invasion.

The foreign legations at the capital of Manchuria have not yet been informed of the action of the Soviet army. The communique said the towns were occupied last night.

Mukden officials returning from Manchuli said today there had been border clashes between Chinese and Soviet troops throughout the week.

Tsai Yun-Sheng, one of the Chinese negotiators, returned from the border today and reported that there was a clash between the patrols near Manchuli on Tuesday when the Russians crossed into Manchuria in pursuit of the Czarist Russians who have been harassing the Red soldiers and who, Tsai said, were continually instigating border clashes.

Before the reports of the Red army invasion into Manchurian territory several of the Chinese officials still held out the hope that a peaceful agreement between the two giant republics of the Far East might be reached.

MANCHULI, Manchuria, Aug. 17.—General Chang Hsueh-Liang, war lord of Manchuria and in command of the Chinese troops massed along the borders, urgently summoned a military conference today to cope with new developments on the Soviet frontiers.

Following the clash yesterday between Soviet and Chinese troops, General Chang telegraphed 300 additional cavalry to the frontier from Tuitshair. The Russians were reported to have fired 400 shots at Dalainor yesterday, wounding two civilians.

Birson, during the early part of the show, thrilled the crowd with a sensational walk up a rope fastened at a thirty degree angle. Then came his feature act on a rope about fifteen feet above the ground.

After doing several stunts, Birson attempted to jump through a hoop. As he made the leap, the hoop struck his heels and he pitched to the ground.

He charged that McCartney not only has alienated the affections of his wife, but also those of his children.

SNOOK MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FILED; CLAIMS PREJUDICE

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—Formal motion for a new trial for Dr. James Howard Snook, who was convicted and condemned to the electric chair for the murder of Theora Hix, his college girl fiancée, was filed in Common Pleas Court here today.

The motion will be heard Monday by Judge Henry L. Scarlett, who will then formally pronounce sentence of death.

The motion charges, in effect, that the jury which convicted the former university professor "elected a foreman, substituted a pray for deliberation on the merits of the case and immediately returned a verdict of guilty as charged in the indictment."

The verdict was returned Wednesday afternoon twenty-eight minutes after the jury retired.

The motion assails "the proceedings of the court," criticizes Prosecutor John L. Chester's "brutal antics" before the jury and claims that the jury was "induced to the populace and the mob, making it impossible to select a fair and impartial jury."

Previously F. O. Ricketts, chief of Snook's counsel, said they would charge "undue influence" was brought to bear on two jurors and that the jurors would be named in affidavits.

The motion also charged "passion and prejudice on the part of the trial judge as disclosed in the record" and "irregularities in the proceedings of the court" and "abuse of the discretion of the court."

The motion is expected to be denied. Dr. Snook, condemned to death when the jury failed to recommend mercy, will then be formally sentenced and transferred to the "death row" at the state penitentiary.

Miss Hix, a co-ed in the college of medicine at Ohio State University, was slain on the night of June 13. Dr. Snook, married and the father of a child, subsequently was arrested. His trial revealed a three year relationship with the girl.

Under the law condemned prisoners are granted 100 days grace after being sentenced. Thus, unless the appeals courts intervene Snook will be executed during Thanksgiving week.

Ricketts has said the verdict will be appealed to the U. S. supreme court if necessary.

CEDARVILLE CITIZENS URGE INSTALLATION OF WATERWORKS

Petitions containing the signatures of 80 per cent of the property owners of Cedarville and 75 per cent of the voters have been submitted to the village council, bringing to a close a campaign to obtain a municipal waterworks system for the village.

Summarizing the result of the canvass, there were 348 signatures to the petitions, including 242 who are property owners in addition to fourteen business men in rented property.

The petitions, presented by the village waterworks committee, urged early action toward installation of the system and were accepted by the village council at an adjourned meeting by a unanimous vote.

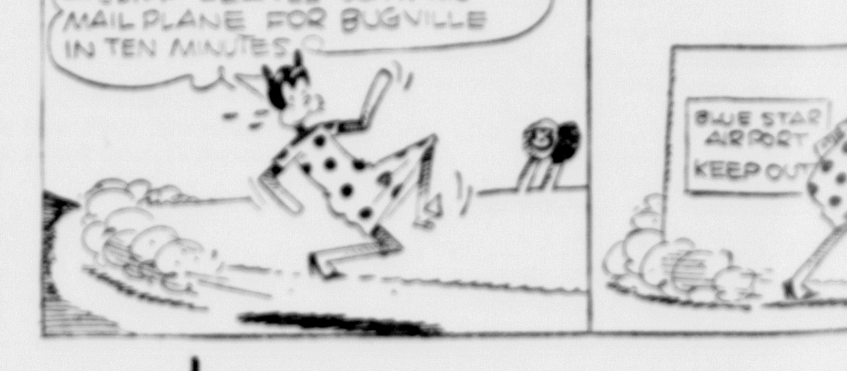

The waterworks proposition has been agitating Cedarville for several weeks and an educational campaign directed by a local committee of thirty-eight citizens placed the issue before property owners and other residents. The result was an almost unanimous sentiment in favor of the proposal.

Recently Collins Wright, Dayton architect, was engaged by the council to prepare plans and specifications for a water system, the cost of which has been estimated not to exceed $50,000.

The site of the well for the plant has not been selected but must be passed upon by the state board of health, which must also approve the quality of the water. It is proposed to erect a water tower with capacity of 125,000 gallons.

Council also has under consideration the question of annexation of new territory to care for a number of families that desire the proposed new water service.

HOW ABOUT MISS 1930?

Beauty Expert Predicts Pensive "Sweet Adeline" Type For Next Year.

By ROY J. GIBBONS
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Miss 1930 will be a "Sweet Adeline" type, for-you-please kind of gal, with all the trimmings that go with the character, including long hair and a pensive look.

Ernie Young, theatrical producer, called the "Flo Ziegfeld of the middle west," vouches for this important advance tip, and in thirty-one years of passing on feminine pulchritude and prognosticating styles and manners, he never has been wrong yet—at least, so they say.

Right about face and Ernie will tell you all about it, and he ought to know, since in the interest of the theater and what-have-you, something like 500,000 girls, or from 12,000 to 15,000 a year, have come under his critical eye.

"The girl of next year will be an almost complete metamorphosis," Ernie declares. "She will be a madonna-faced sprite of the repressed type. But only outwardly."

"She will grow long hair, hide her cigarette and brazen manners."

Arrangements are completed for the Garden Party to be held at St. Paul's Church at Yellow Springs, Wednesday afternoon and evening. A large crowd is expected to attend. A chicken dinner will be served from 4 to 8 o'clock and many entertainment features have been arranged for the affair.

SNOOK EXPENSIVE
COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—It cost the state of Ohio $5,500 to try Dr. James H. Snook for the murder of Theora Hix, according to a conservative estimate made by court officials today.

Transcripts made by three court stenographers of the trial proceedings cost the highest sum, $2,700 being spent for these. Prosecutor Chester's office estimated its costs at about $1,500.

HELD TO GRAND JURY ON CHECK CHARGE

Found guilty of cashing a worthless check for $10 at the E. Main St. branch grocery of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., August 5, Fred Sanders, 47, colored, was bound over to the grand jury under $500 bond by Mayor Karl R. Babb Friday afternoon. He was committed to the County Jail in default of bond.

The $10 check involved in the case is alleged by police to have been written by John Faulkner, 50, Waynesville, who was also held to the grand jury under $500 bond on this charge by Mayor Babb last Monday.

Shoes are to be wild enough to occupy a paragraph all by themselves, if we may believe the theatrical producer. They will carry, in so far as the ensemble is concerned, the idea that there's a little bit of bad in every good little girl. And they will be checkered riots.

Less Cosmetics
"There will be a noticeable decrease in the use of cosmetics," Ernie predicts. "Particularly will there be a much lighter technique with the lipstick. From the almost purple-colored lipstick of last year, the style in mouths will swing back to an au naturel."

"Powder will be used sparingly, according to indication, and scents and perfumes will be of delicate and subtle kinds."

Of course, smoking isn't going to be declared out, the producer said. But it won't be done openly in taxicabs, restaurants and public places, at least not by the majority. Cigar smoking by girls, which increased this year, will not be among the haunted accomplishments of Miss 1930. They are too hard on the lungs, it was found, and really no fun at all.

"Miss 1930 will take considerable greater interest in business and the professions than her sisters of past years," Young promises. "The spirit of independence among women has been gaining ground. With a job, independence is assured and that's why more and more women are entering fields that formerly were looked upon as for men only."

Oh, for independence! The hundreds of cases of working girls of my acquaintance, is little or no object. Independence is the thing they seek."

Exit the flapper, with her pineapple or windblown bob, her breezy careless manners and disrespect for her elders. Good-bye gin flask, too, and "pills" with or without coughs.

Enter, the good-bad little girl, with appearances all to the good; the girl who is a reincarnation of "The Flower Girl of MY HEART," sub-we-e-t ADELINE."

SNOOK MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL FILED; CLAIMS PREJUDICE

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE WAY OF LIFE—Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.—Matthew 7:13, 14.

LEARNING FROM THE PAST

A Yankee drummer boy, twenty-nine years ago, this month, scaled the wall of the Chinese city at Peking, slid down inside and, with the aid of comrades he had pulled up, his drum straps, opened a city gate. A Russian battery jammed its way in and soon cleared the wall of Chinese sharpshooters. The British and American contingents of the international relief force, which entered the Chinese city further south, slipped into the Tartar city through a canal that passed under the wall. A few minutes later the siege of the legations, which had lasted from June 20, when the German minister, Baron von Kettler, was murdered by Chinese soldiers while on his way to the foreign office, was raised and the backbone of the Boxer uprising broken. Among the 924 foreigners who had been cooped up in Peking for more than 50 days was von Kettler's widow, who before her marriage was Miss Ledyard of Detroit.

The siege of the Peking legations was the culmination of the Boxer movement, an anti-dynastic demonstration in northern China, which the astute old empress dowager turned into an anti-foreign demonstration. She found this easy to do, as one of the bitterest charges brought against the dynasty was that it was giving China away to the foreigners. Get rid of the foreigners, she argued, and the basis of at least one charge against the dynasty would be removed. She moved fast. War was declared against the treaty powers, Chinese imperial troops joined with the Boxers and an imperial decree was issued offering a bounty for the heads of "foreign devils."

As a result of that decree more than two hundred missionaries were killed—shot, stabbed or burned or buried alive. Those who could get into Peking did so; but those who couldn't, along with thousands of native Christians, were overwhelmed by the wave of fascination that swept over north China. The few hundred who got into the capital were subjected to all the horrors of a militant siege—sickness and want within, a bloodthirsty army without; while the world abroad, without communication with its nationals, was tormented with anxiety and uncertainty.

China learned something from that experience; but even after twenty-nine years, when it is again playing with the fire of anti-foreignism, we cannot afford to forget what took place in its northern provinces in the summer of 1900.

Ambassador Dawes got lost in Dublin; but we haven't heard of his getting lost at St. James, which would be considerably more catastrophic.

Bo-Broadway

NEW YORK—"Jim" Eagle, famous as "Miss Sadie Thompson," whose temperamental result in her being suspended by the Actors Equity Association, is coming back to Broadway this fall with a new play. She is coy and reluctant about divulging the title of the piece or the name of the author.

"I'll tell you this much," she says. "It will delight everybody. It's a play in which I'm nearly beaten to death—and that ought to tickle Equity, pink."

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

YOUR EPITAPH

Henry Arthur Jones, famous English playwright, wrote his own epitaph and left it to be carved upon the stone. He selected this: "When I have said I have labored in vain, yet surely my judgment is with the Lord and my work with my God."

It might be a worthy pastime to practice up a bit on your own epitaph. What would you like to have written on your monument? Indeed what COULD you have written on it, now, that would be true?

ANOTHER EPITAPH

Wandering through a very old graveyard, the writer of this column pushed aside the vines on the fragment of a tombstone and read the lines that had been put there, over the grave of a wife, by her husband. The line was short, simple, somehow very touching. It gave one the feeling that the man had summed up everything and, being a silent man, had not been flowery in his words. Yet one had the feeling, too, that he had expressed himself rather fully. The one short line read: "She was good."

INTERESTING

The writer, visiting the Pilgrim monument at the far end of Cape Cod, talked with the caretaker. Half way up the stairs inside the monument the caretaker stopped and looked out of the window—long and thoughtfully toward some far hills, and a burying ground at the side of the road. His wife had been taken there to rest a year before. He mentioned her.

"You know," he said, "she was the most interesting woman I ever knew."

There was no mistaking the loneliness and the affection in his tone. Here was a woman who had been a successful wife. He said nothing about her beauty, her dowry, her cooking ability, or any special talent.

BAD PREPARATION

A man may make what he thinks is smart preparation and yet do himself a great disservice. Some kinds of preparation may be very bad for mind and body. An Oklahoma traveling salesman just before going to a hospital for an operation, ordered his coffin from an undertaker. Five days later he needed it. He went into the hospital in the wrong frame of mind. He handicapped himself by his preparation.

COUNTRY NEWSPAPER HELD IN NO DANGER OF BEING DISPLACED

By JAMES B. ASWELL
Congressman from Louisiana

James Benjamin Aswell was born at Jackson Parish, La., Dec. 23, 1869. He is a graduate of George Peabody College for Teachers and the University of Nashville. From 1886 he was principal of a school at Nash, La., and later principal of Calhoun high school, Calhoun, La. He was professor of English at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute for a year and president there from 1909 to 1914. The next four years he was state superintendent of public education. From 1908 to 1911 he was president of Louisiana State Normal college. Elected to congress in 1913 from the eighth Louisiana district, he has been returned each term since. He is a Democrat.

Any fear that the country press will be displaced by the movies, the radio, or the public library is groundless for the community has no real competitor.

The community newspaper, whether it serves the town or neighborhood rural territory, has a distinct personal field. The human element cannot be disregarded, for the average citizen likes to read about himself, and the community newspaper is based on this idea.

Country editors take a personal pride in the appearance of their papers. In news columns and advertising, in typographical appearance, paper, and press work there has been notable improvement.

Mechanical appearance has not been achieved at the expense of literary excellence. In news gathering our newspapers, of course, excel. They are far superior to the old-time prints.

In their search after the truth, editors are more tolerant and often more frank in admitting they have been wrong in some vital community matter. There has been a decided change in the expression of political opinion. Newspapers are not nearly so partisan as they were.

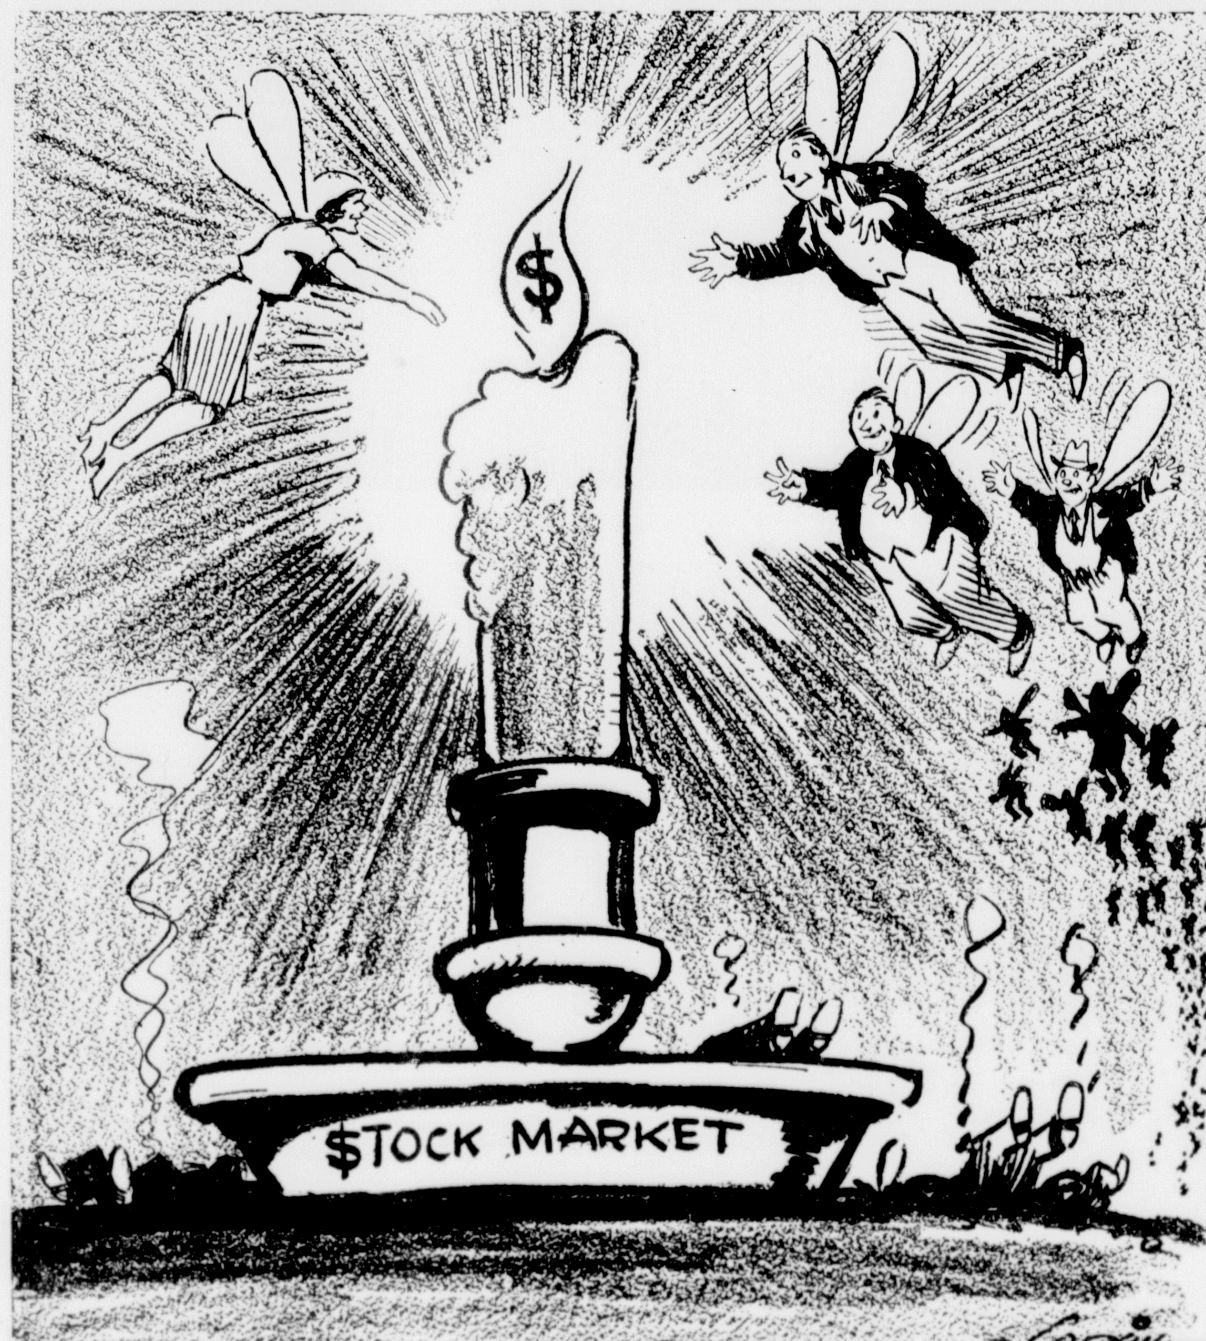

Whatever critics may say, I find no decline of the editorial pages in the country newspaper. They are better in every way than their predecessors, and more genuinely represent the thought and life of their constituencies. They are, indeed, "the mirrors of daily life."

With this progress has come a keener appreciation of newspapers by their readers. The people have greater pride in their local papers, and contribute more willingly and generously to their support.

The rapid increase in advertising circulation has resulted in a higher financial status. The community newspaper, with substantial earnings, has become a solid business enterprise, a valuable property. It is not only a credit to its community, but commands credit at the bank, as liberal credit as the store or factory. The banker takes off his hat to the editor. So does the judge, the doctor, the lawyer, and the local merchant, miller, manufacturer, or real estate agent. They look upon advertising as indispensable.

able to trade and the local newspaper as essential to their business. Our newspapers have always led in progressive movements for their own communities as well as in the country at large. Every good cause of church, school, town, or state, has found in them a welcome advocate. Every worthy enterprise their helping hand. It is gratifying to know that they have progressed with the progress of the country itself, that they are enjoying their share of the general prosperity and reaping the rewards which they so well deserve.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Someone has said that we can be at the expense of their bodies.

Nature gave you bodies to use and enjoy—full of beauty and power to develop to the utmost. Get outdoors and make use of all nature's gifts! Exercise and drink in fresh air! Live close to the elemental sources from which all life springs. Tramp through the woods this summer—row on the lakes—swim in the ocean—fill these last days of vacation time full of joy and relaxation. Don't say you haven't time—don't say you can't afford it. You can't afford not to treat yourself to this kind of much-needed, beneficial rest. You can't afford, either, to be penny wise and pound foolish in regard to this vacation. A little money wisely spent on the simple outdoor type of holiday that you need will more than be repaid by the new strength and inspiration that you will have when you return.

Get back to nature for a few last weeks this summer, and see how much younger and better looking you will be.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—President Earl E. Dudding, of the Prisoners' Relief society, is a practical ex-convict. He served a long West Virginia penitentiary term for killing a man.

Released at last, he founded the Prisoners' Relief society to help other time-expired folk like himself—and reclaim them for useful citizenship.

He emphasizes his record instead of trying to cover it up. It is his underworld passport. He speaks the underworld language and reads their minds. Where the average welfare worker, however, excellent his intentions, is apt to be regarded as a fraud, Dr. Dudding is received as an understanding friend.

With a physician's education and an early career of orthodox respectability behind him, a convict's own acquaintance with convict life and an evangelist's passion for his cause, the doctor is a remarkable man.

From cabinet members down to the wisest assortment of reformed and unreformed (but friendly) crooks, hundreds will testify to his sincerity and extraordinary accomplishments. "Your methods are admirable," Secretary of Labor Davis assures him, in a letter I have seen. The late Woodbridge N. Ferris paid a tribute to his work on the United States senate floor. And so on.

Maybe this will qualify Dr. Dudding as an expert.

"Doctor," I asked him, "what is your opinion of the Wickham anti-race commission?"

"A pink tea," said the doctor, with a smile.

"And our national epidemic of lawlessness?"

"Federal prison management," said the doctor, "is good, except for overcrowding, for which, of course, the penitentiary officials are not responsible."

"However, there is a responsibility upon the parole authorities, whose delay in acting upon a multiplicity of cases is largely the cause of the congestion."

"At Leavenworth alone about 1,000 paroles are being held up without explanation."

"This many releases would relieve the situation immediately."

is denied it, soon goes fairly frantic."

"Some prisoners, eligible for parole, think they are kept behind the bars because it would be poor politics to free them in the face of the so-called crime wave."

"Others believe they are held because of outside unemployment."

"Naturally, they are furious—on either supposition."

"Captives have strong complexes—not always very reasonable, as it may appear to persons at liberty—but let them try captivity!"

"A crowded prison," concluded the doctor, "at best is a place of torment."

"Imagine three in a small cell on a hot night—even at Leavenworth—as well run as an efficient administration is able to run it under such difficulties!"

"At worst, penitentiary crowding lends itself to unspeakable immoralities."

"Fewer laws or more prisons—we surely need one or the other."

This menu will serve two. One of the new waterless cookers was used in preparing the roast. I have had requests for recipes suitable for this cooker.

Today's Recipes
Rolled Rump Roast—Rub salt and pepper into meat. Place waterless cooker over fire and get very hot. Place roast in cooker, sear on all sides, cover and let cook for one hour. Place vegetables in top compartment. Continue cooking forty-five minutes.

Carrot Salad—Put carrots through food chopper. Slice celery, add salt to taste and place in ice box until thoroughly chilled. Just before serving add mayonnaise to taste. Serve on bed of shredded green lettuce. Make indentation in top and place in this cottage cheese which has been seasoned with a little mayonnaise and salt.

Grape Ice—Make a syrup of one cup sugar and two-thirds cup water, bringing to boiling point and pour it, while hot, over a pound of ripe grapes which have been mashed to a pulp. Let stand one hour, then rub through sieve, and the juice of half a lemon and freeze. When partly frozen add the beaten white of an egg with two tablespoons sugar, mix well and finish freezing, then repack and stand two hours.

Suggestions
Hot Weather Precautions.
Begin the day right by eating a substantial breakfast. At noon it will be too warm to eat heartily and at night you may be too tired to eat.

Eat, drink, work, walk and sleep in moderation if you would keep well during the heated term.

Avoid burdensome clothing, heavy hats and tight shoes. These retard the circulation and add considerably to the general discomfort of hot weather.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Answers to Correspondents

B.—Steady loss of weight, fatigue all out of proportion to the activities, vague digestive disturbances and sleeplessness, all point to toxemia from some cause. (Toxemia means poison in the blood.) It may point to toxemia from early tuberculosis, and it is perhaps best for one suffering from such symptoms to see a lung specialist, for early tuberculosis is difficult to diagnose, and perhaps only those who have had an extensive practice in diagnosing lung conditions may be able to diagnose it. (Of course, a lung specialist will also give you a general examination.)

Mrs. C.—The shape of the bones and the musculature of the legs are inherited characteristics, and sometimes the legs are apparently over-large for the rest of the body. When they are over-large from this cause, and not from excessive fat, they have to be endured just as an overlarge nose has to be endured. Of course if they are so large that they are deformed, then plastic surgery could be called into use.

Your daughter of 17 is around 30 pounds overweight, so undoubtedly her extra fat legs are part of her general excess weight. You will find that as her extra 30 pounds go off, her legs will reduce in size. She might also try massage, either with the hands or with one of the patented hand rollers. This will have to be very persistently applied, and over a long period of time, before she will see any results.

Jumping rope may be good for your large hips and legs, but no violent exercise should be taken (particularly after the age of 40). Mrs. C. without a complete physical examination by a competent physician.

Has your daughter our pamphlet on reducing and gaining? If not, she can obtain it by following column rules.

"I am a boy of 17 and nervous already. I didn't think that anyone at such an early age had any trouble with nerves. I am sick of school, but I'm going to stick it out."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Isn't it odd that a young girl will trust the boy friend instead of the parents every time? Her parents have taken care of her all her life, have been her refuge in trouble, have put up with her whims and have perfect faith that daughter will "come out all right," no matter how she acts. In fact, they usually look on her with pride and deep affection, in spite of her crudities.

The boy friend may be an acquaintance of a month or a week, but if she is attracted to him the parents may as well keep mum as an oyster for they will not be listened to unless they sing the praises of the youth.

And when said boy friend suggests marriage—even without said parents' knowledge or consent—the maiden gladly flies to his arms, leaving the safe haven of the home.

The sea of matrimony has many rocks, and the tiny bark, many strike several in the course of the voyage, but at least it is entitled to a fair start from a safe harbor, which it seldom has in a secret, runaway match.

"Dear Virginia Lee: About a year ago I met a boy for whom I have come to care a lot, but my parents would not let me go with him as my brother said he is common. I met him in secret a few times and was ashamed of myself for deceiving my people."

"A couple of months later he asked me to marry him, as he loved me. I love this boy dearly, and want to run away with him, for he says that my parents will like him when he is their son-in-law. Shall I do this? He is 23 and I am 17."

"C. A. R." Pretty shabby trick to play on your parents, isn't it, dear? And isn't it just possible they are right about the young man? It doesn't seem quite honorable to me for

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am visiting with a girl friend of mine and we usually double date. If the 'dates' happen to come in the house afterwards, which boy should make the first move to leave? We are anxiously awaiting to hear about this."

"What is your opinion about the following: I have gone with a fellow who has not dated another girl for over a year. Do you think it's all right if I always let him kiss me 'PHYLIS'?"

I didn't know there was any particular etiquette about who should start to commence to go home, Phyllis. If your girl friend has a "steady," I presume he should make the first move. I presume under the circumstances you mention a goodnight kiss would be permissible.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE OLD ORDER CHANGES Suddenly Peter began to feel himself out of place amid all that was going on around him.

The Queen, who had treated him as an honored guest, who had favored him even as a member of her own household, was gone.

His good friends Dawdler and Whiz were also gone.

To the new Queen and her followers he was nothing but a stranger, which to them would probably mean that he must be an enemy.

In a minute, when all this excitement is over, Peter reasoned to himself, "they will begin to look me over and ask me all about myself. Those few remaining ones who know me may not be interested enough in me to bother standing by what I say, and anyway do I want to go through all that explaining again? I don't think so."

"Suppose they didn't believe me, and suppose they took it into their heads to wrap me up in wax. Before I could whistle I'd be a mummy like the small. That would be a flat ending to a banquet. I must say I don't take any chances, but take to my heels instead."

A decision easier made than carried out Peter quickly perceived. For how could he go out of the

Wandering through a very old graveyard, the writer of this column pushed aside the vines on the fragment of a tombstone and read the lines that had been put there, over the grave of a wife, by her husband. The line was short, simple, somehow very touching. It gave one the feeling that the man had summed up everything and, being a silent man, had not been flowery in his words. Yet one had the feeling, too, that he had expressed himself rather fully. The one short line read: "She was good."

INTERESTING

The writer, visiting the Pilgrim monument at the far end of Cape Cod, talked with the caretaker. Half way up the stairs inside the monument the caretaker stopped and looked out of the window—long and thoughtfully toward some far hills, and a burying ground at the side of the road. His wife had been taken there to rest a year before. He mentioned her.

"You know," he said, "she was the most interestin' woman I ever knew."

There was no mistaking the loneliness and the affection in his tone. Here was a woman who had been a successful wife. He said nothing about her beauty, her dowry, her cooking ability, or any special talent.

BAD PREPARATION

A man may make what he thinks is smart preparation and yet do himself a great disservice. Some kinds of preparation may be very bad for mind and body. An Oklahoma traveling salesman just before going to a hospital for an operation, ordered his coffin from the undertaker. Five days later he needed it. He went into the hospital in the wrong frame of mind. He handicapped himself by his preparation.

COUNTRY NEWSPAPER HELD IN NO DANGER OF BEING DISPLACED

By JAMES B. ASWELL
Congressman from Louisiana (James Benjamin Aswell was born at Jackson Parish, La., Dec. 23, 1869. He is a graduate of George Peabody College for Teachers and the University of Nashville. From 1886 he was principal of a school at Nash, La., and later principal of Calhoun high school, Calhoun, La. He was professor of English at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute for a year and president there from 1909 to 1914. The next four years he was state superintendent of public education. From 1918 to 1911 he was president of Louisiana State Normal college. Elected to congress in 1913 from the eighth Louisiana district, he has been returned each term since. He is a Democrat.)

Any fear that the country press will be displaced by the movies, the radio, or the public library is groundless, for the community has no real competitor.

The community newspaper, whether it serves the town or neighboring rural territory, has a distinct personal field. The human element cannot be disregarded, for the average citizen likes to read about himself, and the community newspaper is based on this idea.

Country editors take a personal pride in the appearance of their papers. In news columns and advertising, in typographical appearance, paper, and press work there has been notable improvement.

Mechanical appearance has not been achieved at the expense of literary excellence. In news gathering our newspapers, of course, excel. They are far superior to the old-time prints.

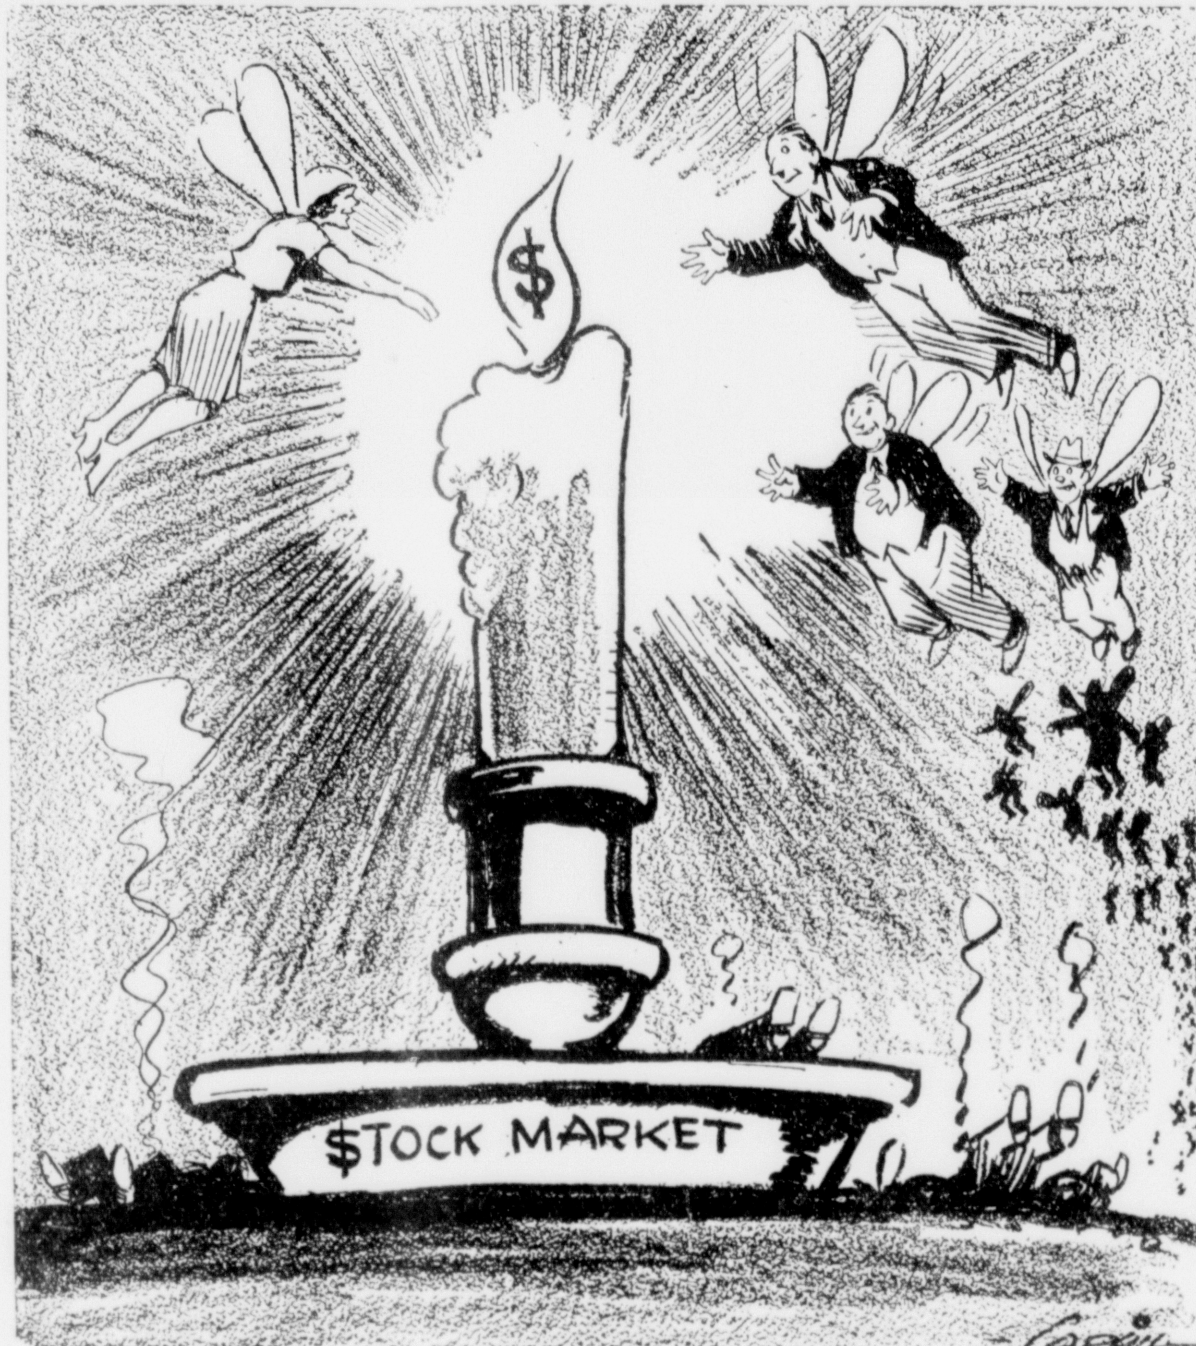

In their search after the truth, editors are more tolerant and often reveal the finest character and culture by frankly admitting they have been wrong in some vital community matter. There has been a decided change in the expression of political opinion. Newspapers are not nearly so partisan as they were.

Whatever critics may say, I find no decline of the editorial pages in the country newspapers. They are better in every way than their predecessors, and more genuinely represent the thought and life of their constituencies. They are, indeed, "the mirrors of daily life."

With this progress has come a keener appreciation of newspapers by their readers. The people have greater pride in their local papers and contribute more willingly and generously to their support.

The rapid increase in advertising circulation has resulted in a higher financial status. The community newspaper, with substantial earnings, has become a solid business enterprise, a valuable property. It is not only a credit to its community, but commands credit at the store or factory. The banker takes of his hat to the editor. So does the judge, the doctor, the lawyer, and the local merchant, miller, manufacturer, or real estate agent. They look upon advertising as indispensable to trade and the local newspaper as essential to their business.

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Someone has said that we can be sure of only one thing in this world—and that is change. Everything changes. Civilization progresses or moves in cycles. Slowly we seem to be going back to the type of civilization that the ancient Greeks upheld. In many ways, people are reverting to nature in the most intelligent way. They exercise more—they live more outdoors. They appreciate equally the importance of developing both mind and body.

The craze for sun-bath and the athletic outdoor life that sponsored it is one development of this trend. Get outdoors—go back to nature—live healthily—enjoy the fullest benefits of a healthy, natural life. This is the cry of the age.

And every wise woman is listening to it—and heeding it. This way lies strength and beauty, because it is nature's way. Nature never intended that people should spend all of their time in houses—should play all night and sleep most of the day—should overeat and go without exercise—should develop their minds at the expense of their bodies.

Nature gave you bodies to use and enjoy—full of beauty and power to develop to the utmost. Get outdoors and make use of all nature's gifts! Exercise and drink in fresh air! Live close to the elemental sources from which all life springs. Trump through the woods this summer—row on the lakes—swim in the ocean—fill these last days of vacation time full of joy and relaxation.

Don't say you haven't time—don't say you can't afford it. You can't afford not to treat yourself to this kind of much-needed, beneficial rest. You can't afford, either, to be penny wise and pound foolish in regard to this vacation. A little money wisely spent on the simple outdoor type of holiday that you need will more than be repaid by the new strength and inspiration that you will have when you return.

Get back to nature for a few last weeks this summer, and see how much younger and better looking you will be.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—President Earl E. Dudding, of the Prisoners' Relief society, is a practical ex-convict. He served a long West Virginia penitentiary term for killing a man.

Released at last, he founded the Prisoners' Relief society to help other time-expired folk like himself—and reclaim them for useful citizenship.

He emphasizes his record instead of trying to cover it up. It is his underworld passport. He speaks the underworld lingo—language and reads their minds. Where the average welfare worker, however, excellent his intentions, is apt to be regarded as a con, Dr. Dudding is received as an understanding friend.

With a physician's education and an early career of orthodox respectability behind him, a convict's own acquaintance with convict life and an evangelist's passion for his cause, the doctor is a remarkable man.

From cabinet members down to the weirdest assortment of reformed and unreformed (but friendly) crooks, hundreds testify to his sincerity and extraordinary accomplishments. "Your methods are admirable," Secretary of Labor Davis assures him, in a letter I have seen. The late Woodbridge N. Ferris paid a tribute to his work on the United States senate floor. And so on.

Maybe this will qualify Dr. Dudding as an expert.

"Doctor," I asked him, "what is your opinion of the Wickersham anti-crime commission?"

"A pink tea," said the doctor, with a smile.

"And our national epidemic of lawlessness?"

"Federal prison management," said the doctor, "is good, except for overcrowding—for which, of course, the penitentiary officials are not responsible."

"However, there is a responsibility upon the parole authorities, whose delay in acting upon a multiplicity of cases is largely the cause of the congestion."

"At Leavenworth alone about 1,000 paroles are being held up without explanation."

"This many releases would relieve the situation immediately."

"Besides, a prisoner who demeans himself entitled to probation, and is denied it, soon goes fairly frantic."

"Some prisoners, eligible for parole, think they are kept behind the bars because it would be poor politics to free them in the face of the so-called crime wave."

"Others believe they are held because of outside unemployment."

"Naturally, they are furious—on either supposition."

"Captives have strong complexes—not always very reasonable, as it may appear to persons at liberty—but let them try captivity!"

"A crowded prison," concluded the doctor, "at best is a place of torment."

"Imagine three in a small cell on a hot night—even at Leavenworth—as well run as an efficient administration is able to run it under such difficulties!"

"At worst, penitentiary crowding lends itself to unspeakable immoralities."

"Fewer laws or more prisons—we surely need one or the other."

This menu will serve two. One of the new waterless cookers was used in preparing the roast. I have had requests for recipes suitable for this cooker.

Today's Recipes

Rolled Rump Roast—Rub salt and pepper into roast. Place waterless cooker over fire and get very hot. Place roast in cooker, seal on all sides, cover and let cook for one hour. Place vegetables in top compartment. Continue cooking forty-five minutes.

Carrot Salad—Put carrots through food chopper, dice celery, add salt to taste and place in ice box until thoroughly chilled. Just before serving add mayonnaise to taste. Serve on bed of shredded green lettuce. Make indentation in top and place in this cottage cheese which has been seasoned with a little mayonnaise and salt.

Grape Ice—Make a syrup of one cup sugar and two-thirds cup water, bringing to boiling point and pour it, while hot, over a pound of ripe grapes which have been mashed to a pulp. Let stand one hour, then rub through sieve, add the juice of half a lemon and freeze. When partly frozen add the beaten white of an egg with two tablespoons sugar, mix well and finish freezing, then repack and stand two hours.

Suggestions

Hot Weather Precautions.

Begin the day right by eating a substantial breakfast. At noon it will be too warm to eat heartily and at night you may be too tired to eat.

Eat, drink, work, walk and sleep in moderation if you would keep well during the heated term.

Avoid burdensome clothing, heavy hats and tight shoes. These retard the circulation and add considerably to the general discomfort of hot weather.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Answers to Correspondents

B.—Steady loss of weight, fatigue all out of proportion to the activities, vague digestive disturbances and sleeplessness, all point to toxemia from some cause. (Toxemia means poison in the blood.) It may point to toxemia from early tuberculosis, and it is perhaps best for one suffering from such symptoms to see a lung specialist, for early tuberculosis is difficult to diagnose, and perhaps only those who have had an extensive practice in diagnosing lung conditions may be able to diagnose it. (Of course, a lung specialist will also give you a general examination.)

Mrs. C.—The shape of the bones and the musculature of the legs are inherited characteristics, and sometimes the legs are apparently over-large for the rest of the body. When they are over-large from this cause, and not from excessive fat, they have to be endured just as an overlarge nose has to be endured. Of course if they are so large that they are deformed, then plastic surgery could be called into use.

Your daughter of 17 is around 30 pounds overweight, so undoubtedly her extra fat legs are part of her general excess weight. You will find that as her extra 30 pounds go off, her legs will reduce in size. She might also try massage, either with the hands or with one of the patented hand rollers. This will have to be persistently applied, and over a long period of time before she will see any results.

Jumping rope may be good for your large hips and legs, but no violent exercise should be taken (particularly after the age of 40). Mrs. C. without a complete physical examination by a competent physician.

Has your daughter our pamphlet on reducing and gaining? If not, she can obtain it by following column rules.

"I am a boy of 17 and nervous already. I didn't think that anyone at such an early age had any trouble with nerves. I am sick of school, but I'm going to stick it out."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Isn't it odd that a young girl will trust the boy friend instead of the parents every time? Her parents have taken care of her all her life, have been her refuge in trouble, have put up with her whims and have perfect faith that daughter will "come out all right," no matter how she acts. In fact, they usually look on her with pride and deep affection, in spite of her crudities.

The boy friend may be an acquaintance of a month or a week, but if she is attracted to him the parents may as well keep mum as an oyster for they will not be listened to unless they sing the praises of the youth.

And when said boy friend suggests marriage—even without said parents' knowledge or consent—the maiden gladly flies to his arms, leaving the safe haven of the home.

The sea of matrimony has many rocks, and the tiny bark may strike several in the course of the voyage, but at least it is entitled to a fair start from a safe harbor, which it seldom has in a secret, runaway match.

"Dear Virginia Lee: About a year ago I met a boy for whom I have come to care a lot, but my parents would not let me get with him as my brother said he is common. I met him in secret a few times and was ashamed of myself for deceiving my people."

"A couple of months later he asked me to marry him, as he loved me. I love this boy dearly and want to run away with him, for he says that my parents will like him when he is their son-in-law. Shall I do this? He is 23 and I am 17."

"C. A. R." Pretty shabby trick to play on your parents, isn't it, dear? And isn't it just possible they are right about the young man? It doesn't seem quite honorable to me for for I have only a few months left before graduation. When I am called upon to recite in class, I can't do it. I get nervous, can't talk naturally, and my pulse rises. I never feel at ease with anyone. What can be the matter with me? I want to get somewhere in this world, but I don't think my nerves will allow me to do so. I'm not afraid, just plain nervous. How can I rid myself of this nervousness and be a normal, happy person?

Can you join a class in public speaking, B? You will find that every member will tell you they have the same experience you have. It is very common. It can be easily overcome with the help such as you would get from a public speaking course.

Until you can join such a class, memorize some story you want to tell very thoroughly, and deliver it about many times, in a good, firm voice, before the looking glass. Then take every opportunity you can, to tell something interesting from the news of the day or from your life. Be sure you know the thing you are going to relate, very well. Best write out the main points first.

Don't be worried about your condition at all. It is nothing abnormal. Of course, I presume your hygienic habits are right and you are healthy physically.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose, nor give personal advice. If she considers your questions of general interest, they will be answered in the column, in turn. Request for articles on hand must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and 2 cents in coin for each; for the pamphlets on "Reducing and Gaining," and "The Hygiene of Women," 10 cents in coin (for each) and fully self-addressed, stamped envelope must be enclosed. These charges are to cover the cost of printing and handling. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper.

him to try to persuade you to run off with him. You are not of age, you know, and the marriage could be annulled on that ground.

If your parents are "agin" him now he certainly would not endeavor himself to them by coaxing you into a runaway match which would involve all sorts of heartaches to them and, doubtless, for you. I fear the honeymoon would be a time of disillusionment for you. The only manly thing for the boy friend to do is to show them that he is not common, to prove he is worthy of you. Tell him so and say you are willing to wait for him. Wait, at least until you are of age.

WORRIED BRUNETTE: It's hard to tell what your letter is all about, but I get the idea that the boy friend is jealous of you but wants to step out with other girls. I would say he was selfish and would go out with others if I were you, and have a good time. Be friendly to him when you see him, though, but give him to understand that you don't have to sit around waiting for him.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am visiting with a girl friend of mine and we usually double date. If the 'dates' happen to come in the house afterwards, which boy should make the first move to leave? We are anxiously awaiting to hear about this."

"What is your opinion about the following: I have gone with a fellow who has not dated another girl for over a year. Do you think it's all right if I always let him kiss me goodnight?"

"PHYLIS." I didn't know there was any particular etiquette about who should start to commence to go home, Phyllis. If your girl friend has a "steady," I presume he should make the first move. I presume under the circumstances you mention a goodnight kiss would be permissible.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

THE OLD ORDER CHANGES

Suddenly Peter began to feel himself out of place amid all that was going on around him.

The Queen, who had treated him as an honored guest, who had favored him even as a member of her own household, was gone.

His good friends Dawdler and Whiz were also gone.

To the new Queen and her followers he was nothing but a stranger, which to him meant he was probably mean that he must be an enemy.

"In a minute, when all this excitement is over," Peter reasoned to himself, "they will begin to look me over and ask me all about myself. Those few remaining ones who know me may not be interested enough in me to bother standing by what I say, and any that I just want to go through all that explaining again? I don't think so."

"Suppose they didn't believe me, and suppose they took it into their heads to wrap me up in wax. Before I could whistle I'd be a mummy like the snail. That would be a flat ending to a banquet. I must say I'd best not take any chances, but take to my heels instead."

A decision easier made than carried out Peter quickly perceived. For how could he go out of the way he had come in, and how could he go out any other way when he knew no other? Plainly, to fall in was easier than to fall out. But Peter was not a boy to get muddled easily, neither was he going to miss a bit of what was going on around him.

"What can they be doing now I'd like to know?" he wondered, as he found himself surrounded, ever and anon, by a procession of Bees, all dancing and singing and waving their wings in a great commotion of rejoicing. At the head of the throng the new Queen moved in a majestic manner, fully aware of her new queenship.

"It makes me think of election night parade that daddy once took me to," chuckled Peter to himself. "I can stay and watch as long as they

Dr. Hugh M. Marshall, Urbana reinsman, had an opportunity to test that old adage, "revenge is sweet," when he drove Counterpart, winner of the $25,000 American Pacing Derby classic this year to a victory over Prue Grattan, winner of the 1927 Derby, in the free-for-all event on the Urbana racing program Friday afternoon.

Turning the tables, the nine-year-old roan stallion finished second the first heat but won the second and third heats and the race. At the recent Greene County Fair it was Prue Grattan that defeated Counterpart in the free-for-all race by winning the last two heats after dropping the first.

Despite the loss of the race, Prue Grattan won the prize offered by the fair officials for lowering the track record at Urbana. In winning the first heat, Prue Grattan stepped the mile in the sensational time of 2:04 1/2, pacing the last half-mile in one minute flat. The former Urbana record of 2:08 1/4 was held by Billy M. As a matter of fact, the track record was bettered each of the three heats as Counterpart won the second heat in 2:05 1/2 and the third and decisive one in 2:06.

The performance of the two horses at Urbana indicates that either could have lowered the Xenia track record of 2:06 1/4, established last year by Becky Beal. The best time in the free-for-all event at the recent Greene County Fair was 2:06 1/2, recorded by Prue Grattan in winning the second heat.

Counterpart's victory was tainted, however. In the third heat Joe Lewis, another entry from the Parshall stable, driven by Jim Matchell, rushed to the front, trailed by Counterpart and Prue Grattan. As the horses headed down the back stretch on the second lap Joe Lewis pulled aside to let Counterpart through to the rail and in doing so the judges held he forced Prue Grattan to the outside of the track. Matchell was adjudged guilty of foul driving and drew a fine of $100 and a suspension of thirty days.

HARNESS CIGARS EXTINGUISHED SECOND TIME BY MIDDLETOWN

For the second time this season Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champions and at present runner-up in the National League, bowed to Middletown Post, American Legion, in a return game at Middletown by a margin of 12 to 9 Friday afternoon.

The final score was similar to that of the previous game here a week ago, which was won by the Middies, 13 to 9.

One bad inning cost Harness the verdict. The Middies bunched six of their thirteen hits to score seven runs in the second inning after having crossed the plate once in the first round. The Legion nine clustered four more bingles for three runs in the fifth and added another in the sixth.

Harness made its nine hits count for as many runs and its scoring was distributed over six of the nine innings.

Paul Boxwell was on the mound for Harness with Hannah serving them up for the Middies.

With the dizzy average of .490, D. Kersey of the league-leading Hooven and Allison Co. nine, is leading the batters of the American Softball League.

Perhaps F. Kearnes, catcher on the same team, however, is the actual leader as he has participated in nearly twice as many games and has a mark of .483. Kearnes is also the leader in another department, namely, hits made, with forty-one. D. Murrell, also a member of the H. and A. team, has personally scored thirty-three runs for the leadership in this respect.

Season's averages indicate that players in the American League are real sluggers as no less than ten regulars are batting at a .400 clip while a long list of others top the .300 mark.

When it comes to team batting averages, the H. and A. is far out in front with a mark of .361, followed by the Post Office with .325, Coates Barber Shop with .315 and Rorty with .291.

The compilation of individual batting averages includes all league games played to date with the exception of one Coates-Rorty contest, the figures of which are not available.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Can the gawky Babe Herman, whose clumsiness has been the despair of managers in at least six leagues in which he has played, become the fifth 400 hitter in modern baseball history?

Until this year, a prediction that Herman would take his place alongside Rogers Hornsby, George Sisler, Harry Heilmann and Ty Cobb, would have been laughed at as hard as thousands of fans have laughed at the Babe's awkward movements on the field.

But the way Herman is hitting now it would not be surprising to see him finish the season above the 400 mark. If he does this he will achieve an honor which thousands have tried for but only four have obtained.

That the Babe should suddenly blossom into one of baseball's stars is the greatest surprise of the year. He always has been an awkward fielder, so awkward in fact that he has been guilty on more than one occasion of allowing a batted ball to hit him in the head while he was trying to field it.

But with the improvement in batting he has become a different player all-around.

As matters stand now, Herman is hitting .412 and has less than fifty games to go. If he can obtain two hits out of each five times at the bat for the rest of the season then Hornsby, Cobb, Sisler and Heilmann must move over and give him room on their bench.

Also he will be the second National League player since 1890 to reach .400. Hornsby was the other and he did it three times, 1922-24-25. Heilmann and Sisler did their hitting in the American League.

SOFTBALL TEAMS IN HOME STRETCH NEXT WEEK; RACES CLOSE

Next week's games in the National and American Softball Leagues will mark the opening the sixth and final round of play for the season and will have an important bearing on the championships in each league.

The Downtown Country Club, leaders of the National League by a two-game margin over Harness Cigars, play the 1928 city champs Thursday night in a game which may make or break the title hopes of either team. The Downtowns hold what amounts to a stranglehold on the top rung and a victory over Harness would clinch the league championship for the leaders. In any event the Downtowns could clinch the title by winning two out of their remaining three games.

In the American League the race is still very much in doubt with the Hooven and Allison Co.'s advantage cut to one full game over the Post Office. These two teams meet for the last time Wednesday night. Coates Barber Shop, only two games behind the league leaders, must also be reckoned with and cannot yet be counted out of the race.

In the other two scheduled games next week, Rotary meets Coates Monday night and the Lang Chevrolet Co. plays Central High School.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Can the gawky Babe Herman, whose clumsiness has been the despair of managers in at least six leagues in which he has played, become the fifth 400 hitter in modern baseball history?

Until this year, a prediction that Herman would take his place alongside Rogers Hornsby, George Sisler, Harry Heilmann and Ty Cobb, would have been laughed at as hard as thousands of fans have laughed at the Babe's awkward movements on the field.

But the way Herman is hitting now it would not be surprising to see him finish the season above the 400 mark. If he does this he will achieve an honor which thousands have tried for but only four have obtained.

That the Babe should suddenly blossom into one of baseball's stars is the greatest surprise of the year. He always has been an awkward fielder, so awkward in fact that he has been guilty on more than one occasion of allowing a batted ball to hit him in the head while he was trying to field it.

But with the improvement in batting he has become a different player all-around.

As matters stand now, Herman is hitting .412 and has less than fifty games to go. If he can obtain two hits out of each five times at the bat for the rest of the season then Hornsby, Cobb, Sisler and Heilmann must move over and give him room on their bench.

Also he will be the second National League player since 1890 to reach .400. Hornsby was the other and he did it three times, 1922-24-25. Heilmann and Sisler did their hitting in the American League.

William Muldoon, Boxing Commissioner of New York State, is, at the age of 84, in perfect health and attributes it to his strict Spartan health regime. Perhaps his favorite morning greeting on his estate at Purchase, N. Y., comes from "Suzanne," above, left. At right

PLAN COMMUNITY CELEBRATION WITH ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW HERE

A community Labor Day celebration in Shawnee Park in connection with the annual flower show to be given there under auspices of the Xenia Garden Club, is also being planned by the club.

The annual flower show will be held in the pavilion and entries indicate many Greene Countyans will bring choice blossoms to the exhibit. Several florists are planning to display rock gardens, pools and other garden features and prizes amounting to $100 will be distributed as premiums to winners in the exhibit.

A band concert will be a feature of the afternoon and in the evening sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and cake will be available at the park, so that Xenians may enjoy a community outdoor meal.

The Greene County Historical Society will hold its meeting at the same time, featuring an address by Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, on "Native Trees of Greene County," a subject on which he is an authority.

The Garden Club also hopes to have Mrs. Carrie Thompson, of Lima, chairman of wild flower conservation of the Federated Women's Clubs of Ohio, as a speaker. Proceeds of the refreshments sold at the park will be applied to the debt on the park pavilion.

The flower show is open to anyone in Greene County and people entering are urged to bring their flowers to the pavilion on the morning of Labor Day. As an added feature of the evening program, pictures of old and new Xenia will be shown in the park auditorium. The program is free to the public.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED

Dr. Hugh M. Marshall, Urbana reinsman, had an opportunity to test that old adage, "revenge is sweet," when he drove Counterpart, winner of the $25,000 American Pacing Derby classic this year to a victory over Prue Grattan, winner of the 1927 Derby, in the free-for-all event on the Urbana racing program Friday afternoon.

Turning the tables, the nine-year-old roan stallion finished second the first heat but won the second and third heats and the race. At the recent Greene County Fair it was Prue Grattan that defeated Counterpart in the free-for-all race by winning the last two heats after dropping the first.

Despite the loss of the race, Prue Grattan won the prize offered by the fair officials for lowering the track record at Urbana. In winning the first heat, Prue Grattan stepped the mile in the sensational time of 2:04 1-2, pacing the last half-mile in one minute flat. The former Urbana record of 2:08 1-4 was held by Billy M. As a matter of fact, the track record was bettered each of the three heats as Counterpart won the second heat in 2:05 1-2 and the third and decisive one in 2:06.

The performance of the two horses at Urbana indicates that either could have lowered the Xenia track record of 2:06 1-4, established last year by Becky Real. The best time in the free-for-all event at the recent Greene County Fair was 2:06 1-2, recorded by Prue Grattan in winning the second heat.

Counterpart's victory was tainted, however. In the third heat Joe Lewis, another entry from the Marshall stable, driven by Jim Matchell, rushed to the front, trailed by Counterpart and Prue Grattan. As the horses headed down the back stretch on the second lap Joe Lewis pulled aside to let Counterpart through to the rail and in doing so the judges held he forced Prue Grattan to the outside of the track. Matchell was adjudged guilty of foul driving and drew a fine of $100 and a suspension of thirty days.

HARNESS CIGARS EXTINGUISHED SECOND TIME BY MIDDLETOWN

For the second time this season Harness Cigars, 1928 city softball champions and at present runner-up in the National League, bowed to Middletown Post, American Legion, in a return game at Middletown by a margin of 12 to 9 Friday afternoon.

The final score was similar to that of the previous game here a week ago, which was won by the Middles, 13 to 9.

One bad inning cost Harness the verdict. The Middles bunched six of their thirteen hits to score seven runs in the second inning after having crossed the plate once in the first round. The Legion nine

KERSEY IS LEADING AMERICAN LEAGUE ATTACK WITH STICK

Ropemakers Show Strong Offense Rec- ords Reveal

With the dizzy average of .490, D. Kersey of the league-leading Hooven and Allison Co. nine, is leading the batters of the American Softball League.

Perhaps F. Kearnes, catcher on the same team, however, is the actual leader, as he has participated in nearly twice as many games and has a mark of .488. Kearnes is also the leader in another department, namely, hits made, with forty-one. D. Murrell, also a member of the H. and A. team, has personally scored thirty-three runs for the leadership in this respect.

Season's averages indicate that players in the American League are real sluggers as no less than ten regulars are batting at a .400 clip while a long list of others top the .300 mark.

When it comes to team batting averages, the H. and A. is far out in front with a mark of .361, followed by the Post Office with .325, Coates Barber Shop with .315 and Rotary with .291.

The compilation of individual batting averages includes all league games played to date with the exception of one Coates-Rotary contest, the figures of which are not available.

She had been "plain Jane"—clean as wax and neat as a pin—and let it go at that. And so she was awkward and slow as she went to work to beautify herself that Monday night.

It took her a full hour to "do" her nails. But when they were finished they were almost as ship and pink and pointed as Billie Langenau's lovely finger tips.

Then she fluffed some of the new perfumed powder over her face. She loved the creamy, velvety look it gave to her skin.

"It takes all the shine away—and it makes my eyes look bigger, somehow," she told herself, smiling at herself in the glass.

Next she went into the kitchen and sponged her faded black working dress with cold water to bring the color back. She carefully pressed it, and hung it up in the closet all ready for tomorrow morning.

They also passed impenetrable jungles scattered with Nomadic tribal natives, tribes, who not only never had seen an airship like the Graf but never even had seen an automobile or railway train or any other vehicle of modern conveyance.

The feelings of those tribesmen on seeing the air monster sped over them could only be imagined by the passengers in the Graf. Moscow scientists who have spent much time in those primitive regions felt certain, however, that the populace must have been terrified.

After leaving this section of Siberia the dirigible was set to pass a great stretch of almost completely uninhabited wastes, hundreds of miles of them, some of the sections explored by Russian geographers. Very few humans inhabit this wasteland, and those who do also belong to Nomadic tribes, some of which never were conquered by the Russian government.

But Chatty was too quick for her. She snatched the box up, and held it behind her back. She faced her mother defiantly.

"Now, look here!" she said, almost in a shout. "If you throw this powder away I'll just buy more. I'm tired of looking like Bessie Backwoods, and if I want to have and the shine off my nose—why, it's my own business! I'm going to have some pep and look like the rest of the girls in the world or KNOW THE REASON WHY! And I don't care who knows it!"

That was lucky, for she was talking at the top of her voice by this time and the window beside her was open.

Mrs. Chatterton laid one hand across her mouth.

"Hush!" she said quietly. "You don't have to yell at me like that. But it's my duty to tell you what you ought to do, and I'm going to do it. After that, it's up to you if you obey me or not. I know you're a grown woman, Chatty. But the truth is that you don't need powder. Some people who have freckles or blotches may need it, but your skin is so lovely just as it is—and you look like a nice girl. A nice, quiet girl."

"I don't want to look like a nice, quiet girl! I've looked like a nice, quiet girl too long!" Chatty brought the flat of her small hand down upon the dresser top with a bang. "The men never look at a girl these days unless she's all lit up like the Northern Lights—and that's the truth, whether you believe it or not!"

Her mother raised her eyebrows. "Oh, so that's it? The men!" she was beginning, but Chatty cut her words short.

"Well, what if it is?" she wanted to know. "It's time I began to notice a few men, isn't it? I'm twenty! Oh, mother, why don't you let me grow up? Why, I, at this age, have a lot more freedom than I have. He can stay out as late as he pleases—"

"That reminds me—he's not home yet," Mrs. Chatterton interrupted. "Pud ought to have been home an hour ago. Ben Tomlinson knows I want him home by nine o'clock—and he's promised to send him home then."

By a quarter past ten young Pud had not come, and Mrs. Chatterton went into the front of the house to telephone Tomlinson's drug store at the corner.

"It doesn't answer," Tomlinson must have closed up for the night," she said anxiously to Chatty, coming back into the bedroom. "We'll have to go down and look for him, Chatty. It makes me as nervous as a cat to have him out late like this."

Ben Tomlinson's drug store was in darkness, except for one small blue light that burned in the prescription room behind the store itself.

"Now, where do you suppose that Pud is?" Mrs. Chatterton wailed, and began to wring her hands. "You know Ben Tomlinson's been letting him deliver packages lately and heaven only knows where he delivers them or what kind of terrible people he meets—"

"He can't meet anybody very terrible in a quiet neighborhood like this," Chatty soothed her. And as she spoke a small closed car came swiftly out of the alley behind the drug store.

The rays straight into it, and there sat young Pud, with Ben Tomlinson beside him.

"Pud!—Pud!—Putnam Chatterton!" his mother called shrilly, as the car passed her and Chatty.

But neither Pud nor Ben Tomlinson heard her, and the car swung into West River street and sped away into the darkness. The tail light became a tiny red spark in the vast blackness of the night, and then vanished altogether.

"Now, where on earth are they going, do you suppose?" Mrs. Chatterton wondered aloud. "At this time of the night? And why didn't Pud come home? He KNOWS he ought to be at home, and so does Ben Tomlinson!"

It was eleven o'clock before Pud did come home.

CHATTY CODDRESS OF GAB BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDER," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc. COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO

READ THIS FIRST:

Charlotte Chatterton, whose nickname is Chatty, is a born gossip and busybody. She loses her job in Mrs. Mayberry's hat shop because she talks too much, and leaves without collecting her week's salary. However, Pud, her young brother, gets it for her and hears from Mrs. Mayberry why Chatty was fired.

Mrs. Harriett Chatterton, Chatty's mother, does plain sewing. Her only fashionable customer is an old friend of hers, Mrs. Van Nuys. Through Mrs. Van Nuys Chatty is given a job, helping in the filing department of Mr. Van Nuys' bond house down town.

There Chatty sees a young man she once noticed buying flowers for a girl in the flower shop near Mrs. Mayberry's hat store. Billie Langenau, the head of the filing department, tells Chatty he is one of the bond salesmen, David Jordan, and that the only girl in the office he ever goes out with is Mr. Van Nuys' secretary, Agnes Herford, a plain, quiet girl.

Chatty thinks he is stunning, and for the first time in her life she wants to be attractive to a man. She buys some French face powder, and some pink nail polish so that she can have hands as pretty as Billie's hands. Billie is always well groomed in the office, for George Mayhew, the man she is in love with, works there.

In the evening following her first day in the office, Chatty quarrels with Pud, as they wash the dishes together, because Pud "kicks" her about having the kind of job where she must not talk much—for Billie has told her never to mention the names of customers that are card indexed in the Van Nuys company's files. Chatty angrily leaves him to finish the dishes. She goes into her room to experiment with the new powder and nail polish.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER V

Chatty slapped him across the face with the wet dishcloth.

"Now, you shut up, Pud Chatterton!" she flamed out at him. "You just say that I talk too much because you heard that was what Mrs. Mayberry said about me! Why don't you get a thought of your own, some time for a change!"

And she stamped out of the kitchen, leaving him alone to finish the dishes.

She went into the room she shared with her mother. It was empty, for Mrs. Chatterton was sewing in the front room. She opened her handbag and took from it the powder and the nail polish. She went carefully to work.

Chatty never had tried to make herself pretty and alluring for some man's eyes before in her life.

She had been "plain Jane"—clean as wax and neat as a pin—and let it go at that. And so she was awkward and slow as she went to work to beautify herself that Monday night.

It took her a full hour to "do" her nails. But when they were finished they were almost as ship and pink and pointed as Billie Langenau's lovely finger tips.

CHATTY CODDESS OF GAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "MONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO

READ THIS FIRST:

Charlotte Chatterton, whose nickname is Chatty, is a born gossip and busybody. She loses her job in Mrs. Mayberry's hat shop because she talks too much, and leaves without collecting her week's salary. However, Pud, her young brother, gets it for her and hears from Mrs. Mayberry why Chatty was fired.

Mrs. Harriet Chatterton, Chatty's mother, does plain sewing. Her only fashionable customer is an old friend of hers, Mrs. Van Nuys. Through Mrs. Van Nuys Chatty is given a job, helping in the filling department of Mr. Van Nuys' bond house down town.

There Chatty sees a young man she once noticed buying flowers for a girl in the flower shop near Mrs. Mayberry's hat store. Billie Langenau, the head of the filling department, tells Chatty he is one of the bond salesmen, David Jordan, and that the only girl in the office he ever goes out with is Mrs. Van Nuys' secretary, Agnes Herford, a plain, quiet girl.

Chatty thinks he is stunning, and for the first time in her life she wants to be attractive to a man. She buys some French face powder, and some pink nail polish, so that she can have hands as pretty as Billie's. Billie is always well groomed in the office, for George Mayhew, the man she is in love with, works there.

In the evening following her first day in the office, Chatty quarrels with Pud, as they wash the dishes together, because Pud "kicks" her about having the kind of job where she must not talk much—for Billie has told her never to mention the names of customers that are card indexed in the Van Nuys company's files. Chatty angrily leaves him to finish the dishes. She goes into her room to experiment with the new powder and nail polish.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER V

Chatty slapped him across the face with the wet dishcloth.

"Now, you shut up, Pud Chatterton!" she flamed out at him. "You just say that I talk too much because you heard that was what Mrs. Mayberry said about me! Why don't you get a thought of your own, some time for a change!"

And she stamped out of the kitchen, leaving him alone to finish the dishes.

She went into the room she shared with her mother. It was empty, for Mrs. Chatterton was sewing in the front room. She opened her handbag and took from it the powder and the nail polish. She went carefully to work.

Chatty never had time to make herself pretty and alluring for some man's eyes before in her life.

She had been "plain Jane"—clean as wax and neat as a pin—and let it go at that. And so she was awkward and slow as she went to work to beautify herself that Monday night.

It took her a full hour to "do" her nails. But when they were finished, she was almost as shiny and pink and pointed as Billie Langenau's lovely finger tips.

Then she fluffed some of the new perfumed powder over her face. She loved the creamy, velvety look it gave to her skin.

"It takes all the shine away—and it makes my eyes look bigger, somehow," she told herself, smiling at herself in the glass.

Next she went out into the kitchen and sponged her faded black working dress with cold tea to bring the color back. She carefully pressed it, and hung it up in the closet all ready for tomorrow morning.

It was ten o'clock, and she was brushing her hair before the old mahogany dresser when Mrs. Chatterton came into the room.

"What in the world have you put on your face?" she asked, coming close. "You've put powder on, and it'll make your pores big just as sure—and what on earth HAVE you done to your nails?"

"Polished them," answered Chatty, calmly. "Now, mother, don't pretend you've never seen liquid nail polish before. Most of your customers use it—and I know I look much better, fixed up a little than I did two hours ago."

She puffed her hair over her ears, and drew it up in a loose knot at the back of her head.

"You look just like a Zulu belle—only you're blonde!" Mrs. Chatterton declared, shaking her head. "No, I thought you looked sweeter and younger the old way, Chatty! And this stuff is positively injurious!"

She reached for the wonderful face powder.

But Chatty was too quick for her. She snatched the box up, and held it behind her back. She faced her mother defiantly.

"Now, look here!" she said, almost in a shout, "if you throw this powder away I'll just buy more. I'm tired of looking like Bessie Backwoods, and if I want to have my nails shiny and my hair waved and the shine off my nose—why, it's my own business! I'm going to have some pep and look like the rest of the girls in the world or KNOW THE REASON WHY! And I don't care who knows it!"

That was lucky, for she was talking at the top of her voice by this time and the window beside her was open.

Mrs. Chatterton laid one hand across her mouth.

"Hush!" she said quietly. "You don't have to yell at me like that. . . . But it's my duty to tell you what you ought to do, and I'm going to do it. After that, it's up to you if you obey me or not. I know you're a grown woman, Chatty. . . . But the truth is that you don't need powder. Some people who have freckles or blotches may need it, but your skin is so lovely just as it is—and you look like a nice girl. A nice, quiet girl."

"I don't want to look like a nice, quiet girl! I've looked like a nice, quiet girl too long!" Chatty brought the flat of her small hand down upon the dresser top with a bang. "The men never look at a girl these days unless she's all lit up like the Northern Lights—and that's the truth, whether you believe it or not!"

Her mother raised her eyebrows. "Oh, so that's it? The men!" she was beginning, but Chatty cut her words short.

"Well, what if it is?" she wanted to know. "It's time I began to notice a few men, isn't it? I'm twenty! Oh, mother, why don't you let me grow up? Why, I, at his age, has a lot more force than I have. He can stay out as late as he pleases."

"That reminds me—he's not home yet," Mrs. Chatterton interrupted. "Pud ought to have been home an hour ago. Ben Tomlinson knows I want him home by nine o'clock—and he's promised to send him home then."

By a quarter past ten young Pud had not come, and Mrs. Chatterton went into the front of the house to telephone Tomlinson's drug store at the corner.

OLD TELEGRAPHERS
WILL HOLD MEETING
IN CLEVELAND SOON

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Through the long winter nights a youth sat at his telegraph key in the Wabash Railroad station at Forest, Ill., playing checkers by dots and dashes with his buddy further down the line. Each had a board set up and made as instructed by the other.

That was nearly fifty years ago. The youth was W. L. Ross, a telegrapher who was eager to read and to learn.

Today W. L. Ross is president of the Nickel Plate Railroad.

The story goes that one night after the last trains had gone through the stations and the two young men had grown tired of checkers, Ross clicked off news of a new book he had just read, "Looking Backward," by E. H. Bellamy. The tale was written as though the author was looking backward from the year 2,000.

The book told of dials and buttons manipulated in the author's home to bring in music from Paris or London. It told of wires such as they were using for telegraphy being talked over.

Ross soon learned that the telegrapher's work was becoming lighter and lighter. He prepared for the inroad of the telephone and radio. From job to job he climbed in the railroad world. Some of his buddies "along the line" climbed, too.

Out of that there was formed an organization, the old time telegraphers' and historical association.

Those old time telegraphers will talk over old days and old times, the new wonders of the age, the radio, and other modern railroad devices, when they gather here next Tuesday for the forty-eighth annual reunion of the telegraphers and historical association. In the group there will be nine executives for large corporations.

She Don't Want Much!

Mrs. Perle McLaren Howard, of Chicago, has entered suit against Leonard Erlanger Bergman, of New York, heir to the Abraham L. Erlanger fortune, for $455,000 damages alleging breach of promise and breach of contract. She wants $200,000 for breach of promise to wed, $200,000 for breach of contract, $50,000 because she was induced to divorce her husband and $5,000 back allowances. Outside of that, she's satisfied.

MISSIONARIES TO ATTEND MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—One thousand women delegates and visitors are expected to attend the sixtieth anniversary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society which will be observed here in October.

The annual general executive meeting will open its sessions Oct. 15 and continue through Oct. 25. This meeting will be followed by four days of celebration in memorial.

Missionaries home on furlough will represent the work in the nineteen countries in which the society works.

Columbus was selected for the anniversary meeting in honor of Isabella Thoburn of Ohio, who went to India in 1869 as the first teacher to represent the society.

PLAYS REFORMERS
IN OPENING TRACKS

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Reformers are a greater menace to the happiness and well-being of the public than all the gambling indulged in by citizens of the nation. Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher declared in reinstating an injunction under which Chicago's two dog racing tracks were operating once more today.

The judge, in ordering the tracks reopened, affirmed the opinion of master in chancery, Max M. Korshak that the legislature by legalizing the pari-mutuel betting system for horse racing also had made it legal for dog racing.

Guessing Games

THEY were a lot of fun when we were youngsters, those guessing games. Guess who this is! Guess the number of beans in the pot! Guess how long the pendulum will swing! Sometimes we came pretty close to the right answer. Sometimes we were a long way off. Whichever we were, we all had a good time, and the worst guesser got as much of the evening's refreshments as the best.

How far away those guessing games seem now! And how they have lost their appeal. Perhaps it's because we learned, as we grew older, that to know is better than to guess. Guess which is the best package on the grocer's shelf! Guess which bolt of cloth is pure wool! Guess which talking machine will give us most satisfaction! No, guessing for those things wasn't so much fun. We wanted to be certain. And that was one of the reasons we turned to advertising.

Advertising takes the guesswork out of buying. It lets us know what is best and what is cheapest and what will last longest. It does away with unsatisfactory uncertainties. The advertisements in this newspaper tell a concise, interesting and accurate story about articles you need. Reading them is the surest and quickest path to wise buying. It eliminates guessing.

By reading the advertisements regularly, and buying advertised goods, you take the guessing out of spending your money.

WILL HOLD MEETING
IN CLEVELAND SOON

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Through the long winter nights a youth sat at his telegraph key in the Wabash Railroad station at Forest, Ill., playing checkers by dots and dashes with his buddy further down the line. Each had a board set up and made as instructed by the other.

That was nearly fifty years ago. The youth was W. L. Ross, a telegrapher who was eager to read and to learn.

Today W. L. Ross is president of the Nickel Plate Railroad.

The story goes that one night after the last trains had gone through the stations and the two young men had grown tired of checkers, Ross clicked off news of a new book he had just read, "Looking Backward," by E. H. Bellamy. The tale was written as though the author was looking backward from the year 2000.

The book told of dials and buttons manipulated in the author's home to bring in music from Paris or London. It told of wires such as they were using for telegraphy being talked over.

Ross soon learned that the telegrapher's work was becoming lighter and lighter. He prepared for the throw of the telephone and radio. From job to job he climbed in the railroad world. Some of his buddies "along the line" climbed, too.

Out of that there was formed an organization, the old time telegraphers' and historical association.

Those old time telegraphers will talk over old days and old times, the new wonders of the age, the radio, and other modern railroad devices, when they gather here next Tuesday for the forty-eighth annual reunion of the telegraphers and historical association. In the group there will be nine executives for large corporations.

She Don't Want Much!

Mrs. Perle McLaren Howard, of Chicago, has entered suit against Leonard Erlanger Bergman, of New York, heir to the Abraham L. Erlanger fortune, for $455,000 damages alleging breach of promise and breach of contract. She wants $200,000 for breach of promise to wed, $200,000 for breach of contract, $50,000 because she was induced to divorce her husband and $5,000 back allowances. Outside of that, she's satisfied.

MISSIONARIES TO ATTEND MEETING

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 17.—One thousand women delegates and visitors are expected to attend the sixtieth anniversary of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society which will be observed here in October.

The annual general executive meeting will open its sessions Oct. 15 and continue through Oct. 26. This meeting will be followed by four days of celebration in memorial.

Missionaries home on furlough will represent the work in the nineteen countries in which the society works.

Columbus was selected for the anniversary meeting in honor of Isabella Thoburn of Ohio, who went to India in 1869 as the first teacher to represent the society.

FLAYS REFORMERS
IN OPENING TRACKS

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Reformers are a greater menace to the happiness and well-being of the public than all the gambling indulged in by citizens of the nation. Circuit Judge Harry M. Fisher declared in reinstating an injunction under which Chicago's two dog racing tracks were operating once more today.

The judge, in ordering the tracks reopened, affirmed the opinion of master in chancery, Max M. Korshak that the legislature by legalizing the pari-mutuel betting system for horse racing also had made it legal for dog racing.

Guessing Games

THEY were a lot of fun when we were youngsters, those guessing games. Guess who this is! Guess the number of beans in the pot! Guess how long the pendulum will swing! Sometimes we came pretty close to the right answer. Sometimes we were a long way off. Whichever we were, we all had a good time, and the worst guesser got as much of the evening's refreshments as the best.

How far away those guessing games seem now! And how they have lost their appeal. Perhaps it's because we learned, as we grew older, that to know is better than to guess. Guess which is the best package on the grocer's shelf! Guess which bolt of cloth is pure wool! Guess which talking machine will give us most satisfaction! No, guessing for those things wasn't so much fun. We wanted to be certain. And that was one of the reasons we turned to advertising.

Advertising takes the guesswork out of buying. It lets us know what is best and what is cheapest and what will last longest. It does away with unsatisfactory uncertainties. The advertisements in this newspaper tell a concise, interesting and accurate story about articles you need. Reading them is the surest and quickest path to wise buying. It eliminates guessing.

By reading the advertisements regularly, and buying advertised goods, you take the guessing out of spending your money.
